Mission Statement

The mission of the Georgia Department of Corrections is to protect the public, serve victims of crime and reduce crimes committed by sentenced offenders by holding offenders accountable and providing safe and secure facilities, effective community supervision, and effective methods of self-improvement for offenders.

From the Commissioner

The mission of the Department of Corrections is to protect the citizens of Georgia by incarcerating over 47,000 inmates and supervising 121,000 probationers. This difficult mission is accomplished through the efforts of more than 14,000 dedicated Corrections employees who work night and day in prisons and probation offices throughout the state. The success that this Department achieves is a direct result of these outstanding public servants.

Fiscal year 2002 was another year of growth for our inmate population as we added more than 1,300 inmates to our prison system. The Georgia inmate population, unlike the nation's leveling prison population, continues to increase by about 3% each year. The growth continues to be driven by mandatory sentencing laws and tough parole policies.

During the year we added 650 probation detention and diversion center beds to offer the state's judges an alternative to prison sentences for selected low level offenders. Fiscal year 2002 was the third year of a four-year plan to double the capacity of these alternative beds.

We experienced a slight decline in our overall probation population from 125,000 in 2001 to 121,000 in 2002 as the full effect of 2000's SB474 took effect. SB474 removed the Department's responsibility for supervising misdemeanor probationers.

We are grateful to Governor Barnes, the members of the General Assembly and the taxpayers of this state who have all supported our efforts to implement a more balanced approach to Georgia's system of crime and punishment.

Finally, I want to express my sincere condolences to the family and friends of Correctional Officer James Henderson. Officer Henderson was killed in the line of duty on June 3, 2002 at Georgia State Prison.

Sincerely,

Jim Wetherington, Commissioner

In Memory . . .

Correctional Officer James Henderson of Georgia State Prison died on June 3, 2002 of injuries sustained in the line of duty. He had been a valued officer at GSP since 1994. He was also an Army veteran who had served in Korea, Germany and the US.

A memorial service was held for Officer Henderson on June 6th in Vidalia. One of the speakers was a long time coworker, Correctional Officer Lucy Kingery. The following excerpt from her comments will give you an idea of the respect Officer Henderson had earned at GSP.

“James was the epitome of the type person and officer every Officer-in-Charge wants. He rarely ever missed work. He was conscientious. He knew policy and went by it. He took his duties very seriously. He was loyal and faithful to his job and fellow officers. Many officers worked with James over the years. They knew him to be polite, friendly and courteous, a kind and caring friend. James knew and believed in God. He talked with co-workers about religious issues. Like all of us, James had hard and difficult times, but it’s to his credit, he persevered and made it through them. His delight, as everyone knew, was his daughter, Jennifer. He loved her and their time together.”

James’ courage and perseverance during the years with us will give us the strength to move on. The pride he had in his uniform and job will help many. Officer James Henderson is a credit to Georgia State Prison, the State of Georgia and the United States of America. We, his GDC family, will never forget him or the price he paid, to do so would be a disgrace.

Board of Corrections

The 16-member Board, appointed by the Governor, develops rules governing the conduct of Corrections employees, the care of all inmates under Corrections' custody, and the management of all probationers sentenced to community supervision.

Executive Office

The Commissioner is responsible for the overall supervision of the agency.

The Assistant Commissioner, the Division Directors, Executive Assistant, Board Liaison, Legislative Services, Planning, Victim Services, Public Affairs, Legal Office, Information Technology, Correctional Industries, and Engineering & Inmate Construction report to the Commissioner's Office. The Assistant Commissioner oversees the daily operation of the agency.

Facilities Division

The Facilities Division is responsible for Georgia's inmate population. This division manages the operation of all correctional facilities and is responsible for the care and custody of all state prison inmates, those state offenders who are incarcerated in county camps and private prisons, and offenders housed in probation facilities.

Programs Division

The Programs Division provides research-based programming that is effective in reducing recidivism among offenders. The Division also manages Health Services for inmates.

Probation Division

The Probation Division provides community supervision and services to over 121,500 probationers sentenced by the courts of Georgia's 49 judicial circuits.

Human Resources Division

The Human Resources Division is responsible for the issues and systems which impact the personnel component of the agency.

Administration Division

The Administration Division provides business and technical support to the other divisions within the agency.

Georgia Correctional Industries

GCI is a self-sustained operation supported by money generated from the manufacture and sale of its products and services. Over 1,800 inmates work each day in its prison plants, which include optics, carpentry, and chemicals.

Corrections in 2002

The agency's strategic direction is to efficiently improve the operation of our facilities, effectively supervise those offenders on probation, and collaborate with the courts, other criminal justice agencies, and the public to keep all Georgians safe.

A Balanced Approach

Our challenge for the 21st century is to strike a balance between “hard beds” for prisoners who warrant high security supervision and alternative beds for those offenders who could better benefit from a short-term center.

Community corrections is a vital component of Georgia's Criminal Justice System. In FY02, Corrections sought to continue probation through funding for new centers, new personnel and additional resources.

Technology

Georgia Governor Roy Barnes has mandated that all state agencies work to better inform the public, especially through electronic technology like the Internet.

The Department continues the expansion of our web site. Criminal justice agencies and the public can access Corrections' database of photos and criminal backgrounds of current inmates as well as inmates released in recent years.

Crime victims can register for notification if their attacker is ever released, and the public can download job announcements and state applications. Legislators, students, the media and other interested parties are now able to quickly access important Correctional statistics, studies, and research reports.

The GDC website, www.dcor.state.ga.us receives approximately 20 million “hits” per month.

Budget

Corrections' budget in FY02 was $968 million. Not only is the offender population growing in number, it's also getting older and in poorer health. In FY02, the medical portion of the budget was more than $120 million.

The Corrections Continuum

Regular Probation Supervision

Probationers must report to a probation officer, maintain employment, submit to drug and alcohol screens, and comply with all court-ordered requirements.

Intensive Probation Supervision

When more structure is needed than other supervision levels provide, a judge can order intensive probation supervision where the probationer is closely monitored by a team of officers.

Specialized Probation Supervision

Offenders who have committed sexual crimes, crimes against children or crimes of family violence may be subject to specialized, highly-monitored probation supervision.

Community Service

As a condition of a sentence, a probationer may be required to provide unpaid service to their community in lieu of fines and fees.

Diversion Center

A judge may order a probationer to stay at a diversion center where he works a paying job in the community and receives treatment options. The center deducts room, board, family support, restitution and fees from his paycheck.

Detention Center

A probation detention center is a minimum security facility for confining offenders. The inmates perform unpaid community work, receive treatment, and are eventually released to probation supervision.

Boot Camp

Boot camps combine discipline, hard work, and drug-education programs for non-violent offenders.

State Prison

State prisons house violent or repeat criminals, or nonviolent inmates who have exhausted all other forms of punishment.

County Prison

Some low-security, long-term state prisoners are incarcerated at county work camps. They provide unpaid, yet highly-skilled work to the counties in which they are housed.

Private Prison

Georgia has contracts for three 1,500-bed private prisons to house medium-security state inmates.

Transitional Center

After a long term in prison, selected inmates are slowly reintegrated back into society with a job and enhanced prospects for stability. Center residents work jobs in the private sector while residing in the transitional facility.

Inmate Population

The number of Georgia inmates almost doubled over the past decade. Tough laws and policies are keeping inmates behind bars for longer prison terms. Georgia has the nation's 6th-largest prison population.

Of the 47,000 inmates in prison at the end of FY02, over half were convicted of violent or sex crimes.

Half of Georgia's inmates have a 10th grade or lower education, were raised with no father at home, have a high incidence of alcohol and drug abuse, and were previously incarcerated.

Active Inmates By Most Serious Cr

Sentencing Laws

With more offenders being sentenced to longer prison terms, the number of inmates in Georgia prisons is increasing. This is a result of tougher laws, such as "Two Strikes", that mandates 100 percent service of sentence for persons convicted of the seven most violent crimes including murder, armed robbery and aggravated sexual crimes, and the Parole Board's requirement that persons convicted of any one of 20 other violent crimes serve at least 90 percent of their sentence.

Active Inmates Prison Sentence In Years

Security

Almost half of the cost per offender in a state facility is allocated for security, which includes the costs for correctional officers, their equipment, and their training.

Georgia inmates are assigned to a security level after a review of factors such as inmate's sentence, nature of the crime, criminal history, and history of violence.

Maximum Security

Dangerous inmates who pose a high escape risk, or have other serious problems, are assigned to this category and are housed in prisons with high levels of security.

Close Security

These inmates are escape risks, have assaultive histories, and may have detainers for other serious crimes on file. These inmates never leave the prison and require supervision at all times by a correctional officer.

Medium Security

Medium-security inmates have no major adjustment problems and most may work outside the prison fence, but must be under constant supervision.

Minimum Security

These inmates tend to abide by prison regulations, present a minimal risk of escape, and have been judged to be a minimal threat to the community.

Trusty Security

An inmate assigned to this level has proven to be trustworthy, is cooperative, and has no current alcohol/drug problems.

Risk Reduction Services

A typical inmate's daily schedule includes work, educational, vocational, and substance abuse programs, and group and individual counseling.

Inmates were enrolled in academic education during FY02, including literacy/remedial reading, GED, and special education.

Inmates have access to the prison libraries and legal materials, religious programming, substance abuse programs, counseling, and sex offender treatment.

All inmates receive a federally-mandated one hour of recreation per day.

Inmate Enrollment in Educational Programs

Health Services

Included in the provision of overall health care of inmates is mental health care. The number of mentally ill incarcerated in Georgia's prison system continues to grow, with nearly 1,100 more mentally ill inmates on June 30, 2002 than on June 30, 2000. Expressed as a percentage of the total prison population, the number of mentally ill inmates continues to climb at a rate of 1% per year.

Basic health care for all inmates is a constitutionally-required mandate. In FY02, health care costs were $100 million. To help offset those increasing costs, the Department is expanding its telemedicine program and is continuing its interagency relationship with the Medical College of Georgia.

Human Resources

Personnel

The 14,430 Georgia Department of Corrections full-time employees are its most valuable resource.

Central Personnel

Administration provides support to these individuals by developing, coordinating, monitoring, evaluating and administering personnel functions department-wide.

It provides oversight, consultation, technical assistance, and policy direction for correctional facilities, probation offices and the various departmental units located across the state, which are charged with carrying out personnel functions at the local level.

Management Development and Supervisory Training	1,004
Pre Service Orientation	3,641

Training

Training Programs were developed and delivered to all departmental employees this year to meet the broad needs of the agency. Programs ranged from basic training to sophisticated advanced and specialized training with various methods utilized to deliver training.

Putting Inmates to Work

To help repay their debt to society, inmates work up to eight hours per day in the prisons, on community details, on prison farms and in on-the-job training programs.

Food and Farm

The Food and Farm Operation trains inmates in food production and processing. Three thousand inmates work in prison kitchens, processing plants and on the prison farms to help provide over 37 million inmate meals annually.

Improvements to prison farming and food processing has cut the average cost of an inmate meal to $1.55 per day in FY02, down from $2.06 per day twelve years ago in FY90.

Most of the vegetables, meats, eggs, and milk consumed by Georgia inmates are produced and processed on Georgia's prison farms.

Inmate Construction

Inmate construction crews serve the construction needs of Corrections, other state agencies and communities. Inmates renovate schools and city halls, construct state park cottages, and repair bridges.

Fire Services

Minimum security inmates work in the prison fire stations responding to prison and rural fire emergencies.

Community Work Details

Low-security inmates build, refurbish and maintain prison and civic buildings, perform road work, clean public buildings and schools, and work at recycling centers and landfills.

Number of Cases of Canned Vegetables at Corrections' Canning Plant

Correctional Industries

An entirely self-supporting component of the agency, Georgia Correctional Industries (GCI) manufactures products for sale to tax-supported entities.

In FY02, GCI's 20 manufacturing operations located at 16 prisons generated over $34 million in sales. On any given day, over 1,800 inmates are assigned to jobs in GCI operations which include metal fabrication, optics, printing, license plates, footwear, woodworking, screen printing, upholstery, garment and chemical production.

GCI inmates learn valuable trade skills for use upon release. GCI manufactures quality products, as evidenced by sales to tax-supported entities as far away as Alaska.

Victim Advocacy

Victims of crime have often stated “they feel as though they have been victimized twice-once by the criminal and again by the criminal justice system.”

All too often victims of crime continue to need services long after their offender has been convicted and sentenced. The Georgia Department of Corrections’ Office of Victim Services was created to offer post-conviction support and assistance to crime victims. The mission of the Office of Victim Services is to work to ensure the rights and concerns of crime victims are recognized and protected during the correctional process.

With the passage of the Crime Victims Bill of Rights during the 1995 legislative session, crime victims were granted a number of rights, including the right to request and receive “notification of the impending release of an offender from imprisonment.” The Georgia Department of Corrections responded to the passage of this legislation by developing and implementing the Crime Victim Notification Program. This program is administered by the Department’s Office of Victim Services.

Crime Victim Notification Program

The right to information is just one of many laws that protect and serve victims of crime. Through the Office of Victim Services the Georgia Department of Corrections recognizes the rights of crime victims to request and receive information pertaining to their offender. During fiscal year 2002 the Office of Victim services registered an additional 1,112 requests from crime victims electing to exercise their rights to receive notification of an inmate’s release from custody. From the inception of the Victim Notification Program through the end of fiscal year 2002 the Office of Victim Services has registered a total of 5,969 requests for victim notification.

Death Penalty in Georgia

A law, passed in FY00, changed the legal method of execution in Georgia from electrocution to lethal injection, effective for crimes committed on or after May 1, 2000. Anyone who commits a capital crime and receives a death sentence, will be executed by lethal injection.

In Georgia, 29 men have been executed since the U.S. Supreme Court upheld Georgia's death penalty in 1976.

Cobb County has the highest number of inmates on death row, followed by Muscogee, Douglas and Spalding counties.

Georgia had 119 inmates on death row by the end of FY02. Whites comprise 51 percent of the condemned inmates and blacks make up the remaining 49 percent.

All male death row inmates are incarcerated at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Prison in Jackson. One female is on death row at Metro State Prison in Atlanta.

Six inmates were executed in FY2002.

Probation Supervision

Georgia uses the Risk-Based Supervision Model where all probationers are placed in one of three programs (IPS, SPS, and Regular Probation), and in one of four different classification levels (Max, High, Standard, and Administrative).

Intensive Probation Supervision (IPS)

Offenders who are court-ordered to IPS have significant substance abuse and/or violence problems. This 5 percent of the probation population requires very close supervision by specially trained teams of officers.

Specialized Probation Supervision (SPS)

This program is for sex offenders and for offenders who victimize children. This 5 percent of the probation population also requires close supervision by officers.

Regular Probation

The remaining 90 percent of probationers are mostly felony probationers who are evaluated to be of lower risk to the public. Probation officers' caseloads for regular probation average 270 per officer.

Probation Caseloads by Supervision Level

Probationers are Managed According to their Risk and Needs

Max: Violent offenders, sexual offenders, predators against children, and other extremely risky offenders.

High: Career criminals, violent offenders, predators, and others with significant risk to the community.

Standard: Mostly nonviolent offenders and those who still owe court-ordered monies. This category may include violent offenders who have shown adherence to the conditions of probation.

Administrative: Offenders who have met all financial obligations and those who have been moved to administrative (non-reporting) status in accordance with state law.

Collections

Probation officers also collect fines, monetary restitution for the crime victims, and fees which are forwarded to the state treasury. Probation collections of court-ordered fees and fines continue to rise.

In addition to supervising and monitoring probationers in the community, in FY02 the Probation Division collected $54 million from probationers in fines, costs, fees, restitution, and Georgia Crime Victim Emergency Fund fees. In addition, probation officers enforce court orders for community service which totaled more than $6 million.

Community Service

Probationers are ordered to perform community service as a condition of probation, or in lieu of fines, jail, or prison. This work repays the community, builds partnerships, and reinforces the work ethic.

In addition to program participation or fees and fines, probationers may be ordered to perform unpaid work for the good of the community.

Community service work often takes the form of unskilled labor such as collecting litter on roadsides, mowing grass, and working in recycling centers. Yet, if a probationer has a special trade, such as a computer or technological ability, he or she may be required to perform a higher skilled community service job.

Community Service Ho

Felons and Misdemeanants

In FY00 the Georgia General Assembly ended the state supervision of misdemeanants. Local jurisdictions now contract with private or county agencies for misdemeanor probation supervision.

Active Probationers By

The number of felons on probation has been increasing since 1996. More than 3000 new felons are being added to probation caseloads each month.

The number of serious felony offenders on probation has shown a substantial increase over the last decade.

Admits to Probation by Crime Type

Probation Programs

To ensure public safety and change in the offender, the Probation Division is putting a major emphasis on substance abuse treatment and probationer employment.

Probation offers the offender the opportunity for change outside of a prison environment. Some, however, may relapse into drug use or may otherwise need additional assistance to prevent re-offending. Here are a few examples of probation programs at work:

A joint project of Probation and the State Board of Pardons and Parole, the Atlanta Day Reporting Center is a facility for those probationers and parolees who fail to adhere to the conditions of their sentences.

The center's primary emphasis is on substance abuse and cognitive skills development.

The Bainbridge Substance Abuse Residential Center is a nine-month residential substance abuse program for probationers who are unable to manage substance abuse issues through community counseling, and who are on the verge of revocation to prison.

The Griffin Recovery Intervention Probation Program (GRIPP) provides services to substance abusing probationers including drug and alcohol therapy, classes on life skills, personal counseling and case management.

Alan Adams, Probation Division Director states, "The Probation Division is striving to promote public safety through providing higher quality supervision while implementing research based risk reduction programs to our offenders. Our service to the courts and our posture within the law enforcement community continue to be high priorities for the Probation Division."
